Thingamajig

The secret life of objects

until 9 May 2010

Thingamajig: the secret life of objects is an exhibition of curiosities that are collected, objects that are ingeniously re-used and artefacts that reveal long lost memories and social histories. Call into the gallery to find out how a microwave and an umbrella have been refashioned, to see a tortoise shell inscribed with student names, and to discover a customised drain cover that tells a story of murder and emigration on the night Michael Collins was shot.

Artists: Bik Van der Pol, Peter Fischli and David Weiss

Featuring objects and artworks from Cork Butter Museum, Cork City and County Archives, Cork Public Museum, An Scannanlann/Cork Film Archive, Fr. Matthew Hall, The Munster Freemasons, and Departmental collections from University College Cork.

"If the main aim of this ambitious project was to be accessible to all and to provide a national resource for the understanding and enjoyment of art, then it has reached its lofty objective"
